Thank You Council Member Klein City Council Approving Tougher Stance on Graffiti Removal

Help is on the way for Columbus businesses and residential property owners faced with the scourge of graffiti on their buildings. City Council approved legislation April 30th that will create a tougher graffiti removal law and use tax dollars to remove some of the blight. The program, expected to be in place this summer, gives property owners 30 days to remove the graffiti on their residential or commercial buildings. Building and Homeowners can give the City permission to remove the graffiti at the City's expense. Columbus requires the removal of graffiti from vacant structures. The new Law will add occupied structures and also stipulate that property owners who don't remove the graffiti could be hit with a court order to do so and have to pay for the work themselves. The Legislation follows City Council's decision earlier this year to provide $500,000 to support the graffiti removal program. City officials also are drafting legislation to create a process to distribute money to neighborhood and non-profit groups to purchase graffiti abatement equipment and materials such as paint and brushes.
